He holds a PhD. in Economics and Business Management from the University of Alcalá (2016). Previously, he obtained his Executive MBA from the Instituto de Empresa in Madrid, specializing in operations and production. His doctoral work focused on the application of the bases of the complexity paradigm to the theory of the firm with the aim of formulating new theoretical bases and methodologies that explain the behavior of the firm.

He is currently a professor in the Department of Tourism at Nebrija University, where he directs the combined MBA program (official master's degree). Prior to joining the university, he has developed his professional career as an international business consultant, a sector in which he has twenty years of experience as a consultant specializing in the strategic transformation of public administrations, and has held various positions of responsibility.

He has been founder and CEO of several companies in the engineering, transportation, e-commerce and business consulting sectors.
