

One more step in protection measures

Dear Nebrija community,

As we all know, the rapid spread of the coronavirus is leading Spanish society to take extraordinary measures to curb its expansion. It is now the essential responsibility of each and every one of us so help stop the spread of the disease in Spain.

This sense of responsibility has led us to decide to reduce in-person activity to a minimum on all campuses, thereby contributing to the prevention of all members of the Nebrija and health communities. Each dean, director and manager of the human teams will do their best to apply this directive immediately.

We have already shown that we are able to provide lessons virtually in an exemplary fashion. And we will continue to do so, because we are an exceptional team that, as I told you in my last message, knows how to set an example. At this time, this activity continues with the vast majority of teaching and research staff and a large part of the administration and services staff working from home. Now it is about taking a step further in favor of everyone's safety and of collaboration with the society to which we belong.

Therefore, we will all continue to carry out our duties, albeit remotely; the students receiving their classes, and the teams working and organizing to carry out their objectives as before. We will encounter obstacles, of course. But we are prepared to face them, and the general situation requires a constructive and caring attitude like the one that this Nebrija community shows at all times.

I am sure that we will be able to turn this exceptional situation into a new opportunity to show our professional demand and commitment. I thank you again and in advance for this extraordinary effort.

Virtual regards,

Juan Cayón
Rector
